

Little fun, little learning!

Life's lessons are simple yet important. Grooming is as important for kids as academics, says Anjum Babukhan

One can't deny that education is extremely important. Individuals need a sound education to strive and thrive in the world we live in! But I view education more as a means to "grooming, and not just schooling." However, more emphasis is laid on "studies," but life's most important learning is actually pretty straightforward than lessons that we can teach our children. As Robert Fulgum, author of best seller, All I really need to know, I learned in Kindergarten, says, "Most of what I really learnt about how to live, what to do and how to be is what I learnt in kindergarten."

IMPORTANT LESSONS

Most parents are so anxious of their child's future studies even if they entering pre-school. They are bogged down by competition. Parents want their kids to be ahead of other kids. However, there are some interesting points share that would go a long way in insuring future success. Uncomplicated lessons ranging from sharing, playing fair to cleaning up your own mess, etc., go a long way in teaching little things about life! These lessons are simple but important! Kids learn a lot along the navigation of life...that's the real adventure and it's just about reaching a destination and learning many thing! Life is a journey...haven't we heard that before?

CHILL OUT

As parents, we need to chill and allow children to absorb the uncomplicated lessons of life. We should let our kids cherish this experience called childhood! The effort you can put into raising your children is by inspiring them with how you live your life...not by perspiring! If we want children to listen to us, then we must be the best example before we preach to these young ones. Someone has quoted that children have always failed to break rules about what you say but they have never failed to follow what you do. Remember to walk the talk!
